but it is understood that the Washington club received a good sum of money for the former manager. When the national commission reached its remarkable decision and announced that Washington would have to sell, re-lease, or trade Stahl, the player was placed on the market. Three American League clubs refused a waiver and comced to bid against each other. Owner Taylor, who was here with the Boston club, offered either Bill Dineen or Grim shaw. Cantillon wanted Tannehill, but Taylor refused absolutely to consider any transfer of the star southpaw, and all negotiations were off so far as the Hub nanagement was concerned. As soon as Clarke Griffith heard of the national commission's verdict he wired and asked Can-tillon not to close with any club until New York was heard from, Griffith con sidered the matter two days and finally made a bid, but it was unsatisfactory, and Chicago sent in a proposition which met with the approval of the local board of strategy and last night President Noyes closed with the White Sox.

Kelley is in trouble with the national commission, and has been declared ineligible. He started out to manage the Des Moines club this spring, and it is possible that that team is negotiating for his release from the St. Louis Browns with a view of having him reinstated.

Cantillon controls the Des Moines club and is a great admirer of Kelley, and may eventually bring him believed.
